

Project 1: Analyzing Personal Decisions: Moral, Ethical, and Legal Perspectives

- 1- Select 5 personal situations from your past (can be academic, workplace, or daily life). Example: copying homework, helping a stranger, following traffic rules.
- 2- Classify each situation into one of these categories:
 - Moral, → based on personal values (e.g., honesty, kindness).
 - Ethical → based on professional or social principles (e.g., fairness in group work, respecting confidentiality).
 - Legal → based on laws or rules enforced by authority (e.g., paying a fine, following exam regulations).
- 3- If you would act differently now, knowing the ethical/moral/legal implications.

Situation (short description)	Moral (Personal values)	Ethical (Professional/social principles)	Legal (Law/rules)	Reasoning / Reflection
1- Copied homework in high school	✗	✗ (unfair to classmates)	✓ (violates school rules)	It was against the school's academic honesty policy. At that time, I thought it was small, but now I see it affects fairness.
2- Helped an old man cross the street	✓ (kindness, empathy)	✓ (social responsibility)	✗	Not required by law, but it was the right moral and ethical choice.
3- Paid a traffic fine on time	✗	✓ (responsible citizen)	✓ (legal obligation)	Required by law, but also showed accountability and respect for rules.
